

Object Detection Overview

Object detection locates and classifies objects inside an image, producing both a bounding box and a class

Key points:

- Two-stage detectors such as Faster R-CNN propose regions then classify them.
- One-stage detectors such as YOLO predict boxes and classes directly.
- Mean average precision is the standard evaluation metric.
- Non-maximum suppression removes duplicate detections.